Assunção joined VdA in 2022 as Partner to head the firm's ESG Integrated Services Platform and co-head the Environment & Climate Change practice area, which encompasses ocean and agriculture related matters.

She is associate professor at Nova School of Law, coordinator of the Master's degree in Law and Economics of the Sea — Ocean Governance (ranked 1st place globally by Eduniversal), lecturing on Ocean Policies, and director of NOVA OCEAN, a knowledge centre established in 2021 dedicated to ocean research. At the undergraduate level she lectures several courses, namely Law and Sustainability. Her areas of research interest are focused on sustainability and legislative architecture and development. At the NOVA University level, she has been leading the launching of the Ocean Studies degree, an innovative and interdisciplinary three years cycle starting in 2024 and coordinates the Ocean Challenges Eutopia Community.

From September 2009 to January 2020, Assunção held several political positions: she was Minister of Agriculture, the Sea, Environment and Land Use Planning (2011-2013) and Minister of Agriculture and the Sea (2013-2015); Member of the Portuguese Parliament (2009-2011 and 2015-2020); President of the political party CDS-PP (2016-2020) and previously Vice-President (2009-2016); and Councilwoman of the Lisbon City Council (2017-2021).

During her term of office as Minister she was responsible for the institutional reorganisation of several areas of administration, participation in the Conference of the Parties (COP) to the Convention, negotiation of the European Common Agricultural Policy reform, and the drafting of structural national legislation, such as the framework law for maritime spatial planning and management. In this field, she led the National Sea Strategy 2013-2020 and was particularly active in the international agenda, having organised and hosted in Lisbon the "Blue Week" (2015) that joined 70 members of governments and multilateral agencies and approved a Declaration on “blue economy”.

In July 2019, Assunção published her book “Confiança. As mulheres, o poder e o país que ambicionamos para todos”, in which she reflects on various issues faced during her ten years in politics, such as the role of women in politics and issues related to the environment, agriculture and the sea.

Assunção is a former Director of the Portuguese Ministry of Justice’s Legislative Policy and Planning Office (2002-2005), where she participated in numerous legislative production processes at both the national level and in the context of international cooperation with Portuguese-speaking countries. From late 2005 to early 2009, she was exclusively dedicated to academia. In addition to her teaching and research work in Private Law, she held several organisational positions.

Assunção is regularly speaker in conferences, both academic and organised by civil society, on topics related to the sea, agriculture and sustainability in general. She is engaged in several areas of the civil society, namely, she coordinates the SEDES (think tank) Ocean Observatory, is president of the prize “Floresta é sustentabilidade” awarded by Biond, and in the social side is President of the Board of Management of Cadin, a non-profitable association dedicated to the integral children development.

Assunção is also a member of the World Economic Forum’s Expert Network on the oceans and sustainability.
